

Hratch Tchilingirian, Doctoral Candidate, Contributes Article to British Political and Military Journal

LONDON, England - Hratch Tchilingirian, the former dean of St. Nersess Armenian Seminary in New Rochelle, NY and presently a doctoral student at London School of Economics, is one of the contributors to the April 1997 issue of War Report, a journal specializing in military issues published by the British Institute of War and Peace.

Mr. Tchilingirian's article deals with Armenia and is titled "Armenia: Rebooting

the Political Hard Drive."

The author places under focus the appointment of the Karabagh leader Robert Kocharian as Armenia's new prime minister and discusses its implications for Armenia's domestic and international affairs.

Mr. Tchilingirian writes, "With [Prime Minister] Sarkissian's resignation, Armenia's political hard drive crashed; the task of rebooting it rests with Kocharian."
